Program:

Today's speaker, our own Becky Schambow, was introduced by Kevin Haertzen. Becky has a career history with Southwest Health Center of some 40 years, serving in multiple capacities that eventually landed her in her current position as Director of Safety and Risk Management at Southwest Health Center. She owes much of her progress with SWHC to Dr. Stuessy who she first worked for when joining the company. As a doctor with a high degree of perfectionism, this quality was quickly acquired by Becky and stands with her yet today.

Even after 40 years, her training continues as she attends a quarterly meeting provided by Rural Wisconsin Health Co-op to stay current on industry standards in the safety requirements at medical facilities. This training is vital to her position as she carries the responsibility of analyzing policies and procedures and implementing within the organization to comply with not only federal regulations but those established by SWHC. In her position an incident report is required daily to monitor for trends in errors/mishandling of procedures and establishing methods to prevent reoccurrences. Her passion is for the safety of patients and staff and she proves that daily in carrying out her responsibilities.

Our own Becky Schambow was today's speaker.

Becky informed the membership that Southwest Health Center is the recipient of the 2016 Woman's Choice Award for top 100 health facilities in the United States. This award is in direct response to surveys completed by patients served at SWHC. Her presentation was timely as the week of March 12 – March 19 is National Patient Safety Week. The Joint Commission Goals established for 2016, which have also been adopted by SWHC, which include: [1] properly identifying patients, [2] improve staff communications, [3] patient satisfaction, [4] medicine safety (highly recommended individuals take meds with them to doctor appointments), [5] reducing emergency alarms of patients, and [6] infection prevention.

Becky concluded by stating that new scenarios surface continually from a safety standpoint that need to be addressed within the health care industry. It takes consistent communication between local emergency personnel, hospital staff, and regulatory agencies to assure safety and soundness for patients and staff. She is confident in stating that Southwest Health Center is comprehensive in having up-to-date means of communication and timely in addressing issues as they surface to maintain the highest degree of safety.
